People in most work environments talk about “building the team”, “working as a team,” and reference “my team,” but few understand how to develop an effective team and keep it that way. Learn how through a workshop with Erik Darmstetter, CEO of Sales by 5, focused on identifying where you and your team can depend on each other the most and least. You will learn how to immediately put this understanding to work so that your team is able to concentrate on activities that keep them inquisitive, focused and fulfilled. Employees who have identified their strengths can leverage them to make a greater contribution to the team, company and customers. You don’t want to miss this!
