Viewing Page History

Every wiki page in your Tiki is stored in the database — not as separate HTML files. Each time you update or edit a page, Tiki adds a new record in the database. This makes it very easy to view a page’s “history” and review all changes.

TIP

You can configure how many versions of each page Tiki should retain in the database (the default is all pages), which types of edits trigger a “history change,” and other options on the Administration: Wiki page.

From the Home Page

1. Click the History button at the bottom of the page.

   NOTE

   By default, the History feature is available for logged in (Registered) users. You can disable the History feature on the Administration: Wiki page.

Tiki displays the history (all edit sessions) of the Home Page.

Tiki has several ways to show the differences between two versions of a page. This is called diffing[1]. Only users with the necessary permission (tiki_p_view_history) can view a page’s history.

Available diff modes:

- HTML diff
- Side-by-side diff
- Side-by-side diff by characters[2]
- Inline diff[2]
- Inline diff by characters[2]
- Full side-by-side diff[2]
- Full side-by-side diff by characters[2]
- Full inline diff[2]
- Full inline diff by characters[2]
- Unified diff[2]
- Side-by-side view[2]
